What my project actualy does

The user enters the crypto they have and how much of it they have into AWS/the webpage my code is on then my code asks cryptocompare's api for the price per coin which point my code then provides a nicely formatted output of their token name and their coins total value.